Terrific Trinity

This week's run was from the Trinity Parish hall and our principal hare was Fuzz. A small but select group gathered to listen to the hare's instructions. We were somewhat depleted due to most of the harriettes cruising around the Mediterranean – lucky girls.

As it turned out there were six runners (Steptoe, Frisco, Pervey, Bags-of-it, Jacko and Jumper) plus two walkers (the hare and your humble scribe). Fuzz explained that unfortunately she was unable to run but had co-opted Steptoe to help lay the trail and look after the runners. Steptoe's Strava ( <https://strava.app.link/UEQsZhgtLAb> ) shows the runners trail and his photos provide the images. One detail deserves a special mention, Jumper honoured McKinley (RIP) by sprinkling some of her recently departed father's ashes on the sawdust trail.

The walkers set off in the opposite direction to the runners to do most of the trail, apart from the tricky bits, in reverse. This strategy worked admirably and the entire pack ended up at the Trinity Arms at more or less the same time. This was 11.30 and despite the pub not officially opening until noon Fuzz had agreed with the management to let us in early (smiley face emoji).

We were very well catered off in our own little annex with loads of chips and very posh bread. After filling our faces it was time for the down-downs and Frisco called on habitual sinner Jacko and our hare to be punished. This was a lovely morning's jaunt – well done Fuzz.
