CHEZ FRISCO

This week's run was from the far north home to Frisco. We met at the car park opposite Les Fontaines on the New North Road. A good turnout was no doubt influenced by the promised down downs at Frisco's pad along with the chance of a dip in his pool. After Steptoe had given us his weekly history quiz our hare explained that the trail was laid in wood shavings. As it turned out this proved to be a bit of an exaggeration - some speculated that this was due to his known predilection for not seeking permissions!

Your scribe went off with the walkers. Those who are desperate to see the route of the runners can find it on Steptoe's Strava download in the pictures below. The walkers followed a truncated version of the trail leading to Sorel and joining the cliff path there. This led us to Les Mouriers valley and back up to the lanes of St John. We then wound our way back to the starting point arriving at exactly the same time as the runners.

We then all headed to Frisco's where we were greeted by Mrs. F (aka. Christine) who had laid out a lovely spread in their garden. After we were suitably refreshed it was time for the formalities, but not before Muff Diver presented Steptoe with a book of Dates & Anniversaries to help him with his weekly quizzes – oh joy!

As Hash Rev was this week's hare it fell to his deputy Jacko to hand out the punishments. The hare and missus were joined by Bags-of-it for falling and ending up with a bloody elbow. Then it was time for Jacko himself to be punished for interfering with a poorly young seagull.

Frisco then rolled back the cover to his pool but he was only joined therein by Jacko and yours truly. A good time had by all!
