A Morning of Disasters for some

“Here’s a how-de-do” as Gilbert & Sullivan put it in The Mikado. By some mischance my photos had disappeared from my camera when I came to download them.

With a number of our harriettes undertaking the North to South Charity Walk. It was pleasing to see a decent turnout at the Winston Churchill Memorial Park. Captain Poocock was collecting the fees & moths were spotted when Frisco opened his wallet. As a reward Frisco’s trainers were “cleaned in the nearby puddle. “Moneybags” Muffdiver however was spotted putting up his paycards on a free parking day.

Skywalker explained that he had marked the trail for the runners solely in sawdust. The runners set off for the west & made, eventually, for the Railway Walk & meeting up with the walkers at La Petite Route des Mielles before continuing towards St. Aubin. However, they diverted up Le Mont Nicolle eventually making their way past The Smugglers, over La Pointe le Grouin & back to the start.

The Walkers, however, set off & made their way up the footpath past Doc Hima’s Pad & through & the Lavender Farm. After meeting up with the runners the walkers continued west until turning into the estates & finding the way to La Marquanderie & finally through the Winston Churchill Memorial Park to the cars.

The Beau Rivage had reserved some tables for us on their terrace where we could enjoy a view of St. Brelades’s Bay. Which was just as well as we had a long wait for the food & no real ale to comfort us. The wait was worthwhile as there were plenty of sausages, chips & bread available for the hashers whose numbers were swelled by plenty of newcomers.

The down-downs were simplicity itself. Muffdiver was rewarded for his generosity to the States by employing unnecessary paycards & our hares for sorting out the trail for what turned out to be a fine morning

On on,

Steptoe
