L'est est 'best'

This week it was once again the turn of Ballcock to arrange the trail and this could mean only one thing – yes we were in the glorious east of the Island. The pack convened at the Seymour Inn and we were expecting a reduced turnout due to an army of harettes braving the rigours of the West Highland Way. Therefore it was a pleasant surprise to see that fifteen should have decided to join us on what was a lovely sunny morning. (Somewhat different to the weather conditions facing the travelling harettes in Jockland!)

After the GM had called us to order Ballcock explained that he hadn't actually laid a trail and so he was a 'de facto' live hare. So off went the runners followed shortly by the walkers. The trail commenced on the beach heading north and from a walker's perspective the runners were soon disappearing into the distance.

The walkers meanwhile carried on to the Royal Jersey golf course before heading inland. Their circular walk through the lanes eventually bringing them back to the Seymour Inn where they found that the runners had already returned.

The down downs this week included Jacko for his birthday, Capt. Poocock who had received an emergency lift from Tinky Winky and of course our wonderful hare. A delightful morning.
