Hareless?!

It is unusual to turn up for the hash & find that our hare has gone AWOL. However, Software has a very good reason for not leading the pack today as he is unwell. Luckily he had laid the trail earlier in the week & had done the decent thing by bringingt the food supplies to Le Hocq Car Park & then returning to his bed of pain. He had even made time to brief Wendolene as to the trail to be followed.

Whilst not too many Crapauds had turned up our numbers were augmented by Shilling & Fetal, our good friends from the Truro Hash. Fetal seemed to have recovered from the indiposition that kept her away from last week's hash & was eager for the walk.

After his rants about the Football Season starting too ealy, Steptoe at least, gave credit to Jersey Bulls for coming back from two goals down in the first 20 minutes against Alton to manage a two all draw. Muff Diver managede not to be present to answer the question concerning the Evening Post in 1940.

Whilst the runners set off in one direction the walkers went in the opposite diection Heading under the railway bridge & past Le Rocquier School. The walkers climb the hill & make use of the footpath that takes them towards Nicolle Tower & then the dodgy paths to Le Dolmen du Mont Ubé. The photo opportunity was, as usual, just too irresistible. The walkers made their way down La Rue de la Blinerie & eventually to the car park & the "dining" area. There was, as yet, no sign of the valiant runners. The goodies were produced from Twin Peak's car & the pack, complete with runners, was soon contentely munching away. Ragsby & Tinky Winky had managed to join the assermbly & Muff Diver was at last on hand to learn of the 1940 question. Our eyes lit up with the prospect of some decent Stinky Bay ale when Jacko produced a can. He might have been rewarded with a down-down but this was no even considered when it was discovered that the can was empty. He was lucky to survive unharmed!

Would there be anyone to punish? was the question. Software was confined to his bed, Wendolene said that the trail was so wellmarked that she was not really a hare & Twin Peaks said she had only brought the goodies from her car. Don't worry, although there were no birthdays to commemorate, our visitors from Truro deserved to be rewarded. They at least did not let themselves & their hash down.
