Satan's Botty

This morning's run was from that well known Jersey beauty spot Satan's Botty (aka Devil's Hole). Our hare was the indomitable Muff Diver. After the GM had called the circle Muff Diver explained that the run was extremely well laid with sawdust. He also warned the runners that it would be a long and arduous trail and that any of them wanted to bail out and join the walkers now was the time. However all of the six hardy souls demurred and soon found out that he wasn't joking.

As promised the trail was nearly six miles long and included many long ascents and steep descents. Just what was needed on a gloriously sunny day. The walkers did not travel quite so far but were also subjected to the ups and downs. The run/walk did show off Jersey at its very best with wonderful views over our northern cliffs. So all the effort was well worth it.

At the end of the run we convened on the patio outside The Priory. A lovely sunny spot to enjoy some well deserved liquid refreshments and high class sausage and chips. It also gave the opportunity for some reminiscing about the trail. This included a rather blunt contribution from 27°S who said, with a cheeky grin that our hare was “a right btard”!

After we had consumed our fill the Jacko commenced with the down downs. He called on our hare who was joined by 27°S who was punished for dissing the hare.

A very suitable ending to a lovely morning.
