'Snobins'

It was out west this week for Hooker & Poocock's run from St. Aubin's (Snobins). The pack eventually assembled outside St. Brelade's parish hall after some frantic hunting for parking spaces. This didn't affect Tinky Winky however as he turned up on his bike – some early training for the upcoming bike bash? Frisco arrived with a number of relations of varying ages who added significantly to the amount of runners for the trail. Another blast from the past was that both hares actually ran the trail as well – bravo! So this week we had as many runners as walkers.

We all set off in a westwardly direction and the runners were soon out of sight. If you want to see their route have a look at Steptoe's Strava download on the last page.

The walkers eventually joined the footpath to Sandybrook and headed toward St. Aubin's High Street via Beaumont. They arrived at The Trafalgar in plenty of time to get their drinks in before the runners appeared.

After slaking our thirsts the hares laid out a lovely spread of baguettes, chesses, dips, pate and crisps – yum-yum. However we were so swelled by the Frisco clan that Hooker had to make a couple of emergency dashes to the supermarket for more supplies. In the end there was more than enough to satisfy even the greediest hashers (no names, no pack drill).

The down downs began with Frisco for last weeks incident with his car (see Crapaud Report No. 1853), and then the two hares for a truly splendid job.
