Returners & Sinners

This Sunday it was great to welcome back Two Globe-Trotters, when You Tube & Ice Slips graced us with their presence once again, after a rather long absence. And we though they had got fed-up with us mischievous scally-wags? Or maybe they had forgotten about how silly and very mischievous scally-wags we can be!

We also had a couple of self-confessed Sinners, who are nowadays becoming rather rare and elusive to identify. More about them later. Firstly, our GM Jacko appealed for volunteers to Marchal Liberation Day commemoration on 9 May, then diverted onto noting Jersey Bulls won again so qualifying for the play-off (Editor, what do they play with?), Ladies Bulls reportedly won 6- Nil but Jersey cricketers lost to Scotland. Rien ne change jamais, I thought. Finally, Jacko commented on the lovely morning before handing over to Fuzz, this Sunday's Hare. She immediately claimed that "this is a straightforward Run / Walk", before hopelessly complicating matters, going onto warning about one dangerous horse to avoid, entreating us to stick to edge of the potato fields and warning us to display our parking discs. After revealing the Trail was laid in blond sawdust (like my hair colour, she preened) and white chalk – when some Wag muttered "Did you say Soy Sauce?" (Editor, I still can't figure out the literal or even culinary connection?) - she got fed-up with our banter by telling us to Bugger Off & On, On!

By all accounts the Trail was excellent, with Fisco congratulating Fuzz afterwards, although I note from Steptoe's Strava record (see last page) there was some confusion at the start with Runners traipsing backwards & forwards outside St Martin's Public Hall before they found the blond sawdust or white chalk. From there it was a relatively straight Run south to Queens Valley Reservoir middle weir & back up north mixed in with a few bendy loops here and there. Meanwhile the Walkers meandered around the by-ways of mainly St Martin with a smidgeon of north St Saviour & Grouville.

Eventually the Walkers arrived back at Royal St Martin about 11.30am, with the Runners gasping back about 15 minutes later. We slouched in the comfy garden chairs enjoying spring sunshine and resting our weary bones until the pub served up tasty bacon baps & chips. Staple fare for Hashers. Software was very serious about savouring his last chip, taking a long time before it entered his gob then withing seconds it was gone down his gullet (see page 8 for the photographic evidence, M'Lud). After we had sated our thirst & appetite our GM brought us to order, announcing winner of the Easter Hat competition a few weeks ago was Steptoe for his long golden locks of hair (not been to a hairdresser for yonks), before presenting him with a crushed chocolate Easter egg. I understand this was not a shop-damaged on when bought, but it has been crushed by Jack dropping it – or maybe by his bum sitting on the poor egg! Then Vital Statistics birthday was celebrated by giving her a Down-Down, about which she looked rather non-plussed, before Commando was hauled up before us to be reprimanded for leaving her car keys down the Royal St Martin pub's bog! I hope she had not put a Number Two down the toilet first? Finally Fuzz was thanked for a great Trail with a half-pint, which she quickly downed amazingly beating Steptoe and also Commando – who had not even taken the head of her half-pint when Fuzz finished! At this point I overheard Isitbuggery whispering to Sue "See you down the garage", which sounded like an invitation to a naughty Tete a Tete! .... On On, Tinks
